

Home Office

NSAR Training Provider Forum – 28th April 2016

At the recently, very well attended Training Provider Forum at NTAR in Northampton, the guest speaker was Jonathan Bartram [Local Partnership Manager] from Immigration Enforcement.

During his presentation he detailed links to various websites in the fight to prevent fraudulent identity documents being used and checking for the right to work within the UK. Please find below the links below for your ease.

Link to a guide on examining identity documents:

www.gov.uk/government/publications/recognising-fraudulent-identity-documents

Employers Checks & Guidance on:

how to carry out right to work checks and what documents you can accept

<https://www.gov.uk/employers-checks-job-applicants>

Immigration Issues:

Reporting immigration crime if you suspect that someone is in the UK illegally, or is working illegally. The link below will take you to the appropriate page on the Gov.uk website:

<https://www.gov.uk/report-immigration-crime>

Online database which can be used to compare documents presented for employment purposes to help verify their authenticity. The Public Register of Authentic Travel and Identification Documents Online (PRADO) website can be found at the following link:

www.prado.consilium.europa.eu/en/homeindex

NSAR - Briefing Note 1

NSAR is working with the Home Office Team to have a bespoke briefing/training event written to help provider's spot documents & individuals that may have potentially broken the rules and are not entitled to the training and/or assessment.

The aim of this training will be to increase awareness of different types of identity documents, provide a basic awareness of document abuse and increase confidence in what to look for when presented with an identity document.

What the training will not do is make every individual a forgery expert but hopefully it will increase your vigilance at your training centres.

Once the course has been finalised you will be contacted again with further details.

Regards

Kim Millen
Chief Operating Officer